

SPIRIT LIST

The word alcohol derives from the Arabic word 'Al-Kohl', literally meaning '...the powder of antimony used to colour eyebrows' and refers to the earliest use of alcohol – cosmetics. The origin of alcohol probably lies in Mesopotamia (modern day Iran/Iraq) and would have come about by leaving bread out in the hot sun, which would have naturally fermented to produce an early kind of beer. It was not until the introduction of the pot still in the 5th century AD that fermented alcohols became commercially distilled to produce a 'spirit'. Today, alcohol plays a fundamental part in our world – it is still used widely in the production of cosmetics, forms the base of many medicines and is drunk everywhere at times of joy, sadness and to mark any occasion. Cheers!

LIQUEURS & CORDIALS

All liqueurs have one thing in common; they all have spirits as a base. They are sweetened alcoholic drinks made by mixing or redistilling spirits with flavouring and colouring. Within the EEC a liqueur must have an alcohol content of at least 15% alc./Vol. and a minimum sugar content of 100g per litre.

VODKAS

Vodka's origin is the source of a bitter dispute between Russians and Poles. Both argue that it originated in their country. The name 'Vodka' is a diminutive of the Russian word for water and translates as 'little water'. The Polish word 'wódka' is a diminutive of the Polish word for water and also translates as 'little water'. Both names probably refer to the alchemical idea that spirits were 'water of life'.

TEQUILAS

Tequila is the first denomination of origin spirit produced in Mexico (others being Sotol from Chihuahua and Mescal from Oaxaca) uniquely made from Agave Tequilana Weber, blue variety. The best tequila's are 100% agave. A denomination of origin spirit that has been recognised by a global audience and can only be produced in a specific part of the world, tequila is produced primarily in the Mexican state of Jalisco, which accounts for 98% of all production. In addition to all 124 counties in Jalisco, tequila can be legally produced in specified counties in the states of Tamaulipas, Guanajuato, Nayarit and Michoacan. Blancos are unaged or aged up to 60 days, reposados are aged up to twelve months and añejos are aged up to three years. Extra añejos are a new category of tequila which has been aged more than three years.

TEQUILA VALLEY

The area surrounding the town of Tequila is dominated by Tequila Volcano, which is a dormant volcano that features fertile dark brown earth. The tequila produced from distilleries that source Agave from this area tends to be earthy, vegetal and herbaceous when bottled young.

LOS ALTOS

The Los Altos region of Jalisco is typified by its red soil. This soil isn't known for being as fertile for other crops, but it does wonders for the Agave tequilana. Consequently, the best agave comes from this area. Typically, the unaged Tequilas from this area will have a fruity and spicy bouquet.

RUMS

Rum is a distilled beverage made from sugar cane by-products such as molasses for Rum Industrial and sugar cane juice for Rum Agricole by a process of fermentation and distillation. The distillate, a clear liquid, is then usually aged in oak and other casks.

WHISKIES SINGLE MALT

Single malt whisky in Scotland is a by-product of the very profitable blended category. These are the notes that play the chords in your glasses of Chivas, Johnnie Walker and Bailie Nicol Jarvie. Popularised in the 1960s by Willaim Grant & Sons, single malts are currently enjoying a renaissance amongst adventurous drinkers. Keep an eye out for Japanese and Indian malts and forget Islay, Speyside, Highland and Lowland. Remember; Rich/Light, Delicate/Smokey. Renowned whisky expert Dave Broom's flavour map is here to help.

AMERICAN WHISKEYS

BOURBON

By law, bourbon must be made from at least 51% corn, or maize - typically about 70% - with the remainder being wheat and/or rye, and, sometimes, malted barley. It is distilled to no more than 160 % proof, and aged in new charred oak barrels for at least two years - but usually for much longer.

RYE

In the United States, "rye whiskey" is, by law, made from a mash of at least 51% rye. (The other ingredients of the mash are usually corn and malted barley.) Rye whiskey was the prevalent whiskey of the north-eastern states of America, especially Pennsylvania and Maryland, but by and large disappeared after Prohibition, with only a few remaining distilleries producing today.

TENNESSEE

Tennessee whiskey is generally similar to bourbon, in that it is composed of a mash of 51–79% corn, or maize, and is aged in new, charred oak barrels for a minimum of two years. The difference between the two is that Tennessee whiskey must undergo the Lincoln County Process which requires that the whiskey be filtered through 10 feet of maple charcoal. It is considered to give the whiskey a distinctive flavour and also makes it milder and less flavourful. Bourbon cannot be filtered through charcoal.

BRANDIES

Most brandies are distilled from fermented grape juice. However, they can also be distilled from other fruits—notably plums, apples or cherries. Most wine-making areas also produce brandy.

COGNAC

Cognac is a fine French brandy from the region around the little town of Cognac in the south west of France. The area is divided into six sub-regions, reflecting the variation in climate and soil. As a general rule, the finest have more chalk in their soil and are in the centre of the region, known as 'Grand Champagne'.

ARMAGNAC

Armagnac is a fine French brandy from the Gascony region, an inland area south of Bordeaux which stretches to the Pyrenees. The wine makers of Gascony were among the first in France to learn the method of distillation. Cognac also tends to depend heavily on the Ugni Blanc grape, which is popular in Armagnac.
